{ encounters of the nice kind }

Photography, text & design by Toy Kay Chin.

When they first became neighbours in Serangoon Avenue 1 more than 15 years ago, they were worried that they would not get along. But today, they talk about everything and have a bond most people are envious of.

"We confide in each other and share secrets. When I run out of gas, I just cook in her house. When my mom was sick, Lily's daughter took her to the doctor. She has a set of my keys. It's not difficult to get along with neighbours of different race. We're not just neighbours or friends. We are like family."
